READING COMPREHENSION (7½ Marks)

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions which follow.

Fred and I met at a friend's birthday party one Valentine's Day and just like a joke we were attracted to each other. It was love at first sight. The tall, slim young man with dark wavy hair was exceedingly good-looking and irresistible.

We started dating. We knew it was just for fun, but soon discovered that we were getting very serious. I had found my dream man; a very successful one indeed.

Many times, Fred visited me, spent time in my house and vice-versa, so when he proposed to me, I did not hesitate to accept his hand in marriage. I thought he understood me and I also understood him. Not long after this, we met both families and wedding preparations were under way. Both families were very excited about the relationship. Wedding bells did not take long to start ringing and on the 22nd of December 2009, the Kumbo Cathedral celebrated our nuptial mass.

After the wedding, we moved into our three-room apartment in Douala. I was hit hard by the realization that after every wedding comes a marriage. Very few brides understand that the wedding is not necessarily the beginning of a great life, but the possible end of one. Our honeymoon had been a disappointment, but my hopes for the future were brighter. Unfortunately, when we returned from Kribi, I became stupid overnight.

From being the urbane queen of Bui, I quickly became Fred's own private 'Eliza Doo-little'. What had looked so smooth and sophisticated in Bui suddenly turned shady in Douala. While Fred had appeared to accept me just as I was before we were married, he found numerous faults in me as I took on the role of his wife. When our marriage was one week old, he announced, "I'm going to put you on a training programme. It will help you become a perfect wife. The first thing we have to do is get rid of your Kumbo accent."

"I don't have an accent," I snapped. "Everybody in Kumbo talks like me."

"Well, it may sound all right in Kumbo" said Fred, "but your accent will never be accepted in Douala society."

I was crushed. I had thought my diction and intonation faultless. It distressed me that I had to learn to talk all over again. Every time I put a 'y' where it should not be as in 'yourney' for 'journey' and 'u' for 'o' as in 'phoone', Fred made me repeat the words three times correctly. For a person who talked much and as fast as I did, this constant correction was unbearable. I soon stopped talking and communicated with Fred only in simple, one-syllable words that contained no "j"s and "o"s.

The second lesson was teaching me how to walk. Since I had taken modelling and drama, I thought I knew how to walk quite nicely. When I defended myself, Fred pointed out that my feet turned out at the toes and his mother had always told him one should walk with one's toes straight ahead. Every night he made me practice by walking on the tiles on our foyer floor until I could go ten lengths without my toes lapping over the lines. What an exciting way to spend an evening!

My third lesson was how to answer the telephone. In Kumbo we just said, "Hello", but Fred said this was uncouth. I had to pick up the phone and say, "Good evening, this is Florence Tata. With whom did you wish to speak?" I thought this wordy and ridiculous, but Fred insisted and called several times a day to spot-check my responses.

My fourth and most difficult lesson was cooking. He analysed every dish and then gave me an instant critique. Fred was in the restaurant business and knew far more about cooking than I did. He explained that one should never put two vegetables of the same colour on the same plate. Also, one should never put two vegetables of the same consistency together. In other words, I should never serve carrots and yams on the same plate. The other rule I found difficult to follow was that I must always pre-heat the dinner plates and pre-chill the salad plates. Fred made me recite to him, "Hot food on hot plates, cold food on cold plates".

The fifth lesson in my exciting bridal instruction course was on housekeeping. When he came home at night, he could, with one sweep of his eye, see everything I had not done properly. He would point out my sins of commission or omission, and with a condescending smile show me how to do everything better. 45

One night after watching me wash the dishes, Fred heaved a big sigh and told me I had made forty-two unnecessary moves. I had never heard of anyone counting the moves one made washing dishes, so I threw a big wet sponge at him. He was upset with my unladylike behaviour and could not understand what had disturbed me.

“I’m sick of your constant instruction,” I said. He replied, “It’s only natural for one who is more gifted to share his knowledge with one who is less fortunate.” 50

So there it was - Fred’s whole attitude towards marriage: a brilliant man trying to put up with a stupid woman.
